For more than 20 years, family caregivers have been supported through the National Family Caregiver Support Program (NFCSP) of the Older Americans Act (Title IIIE). The NFCSP provides information to caregivers about available services; assistance in gaining access to services; counseling, support groups and caregiver training; respite care; and supplemental services.

The recent Process and Outcome Evaluations of the NFCSP demonstrated the program’s importance as a catalyst for states to better support the needs of family caregivers. More importantly, since 2011, 77 to 82 percent of NFCSP caregivers report services enabled them to provide care for longer than otherwise would have been possible.

The RAISE (Recognize, Assist, Include, Support, and Engage) Family Caregivers Act of 2017 directs the development of the National Family Caregiving Strategy (the Strategy) informed by a Family Caregiving Advisory Council (the Council). When complete, the Strategy will provide a roadmap for federal, state, community, health and long-term services and supports programs to more proactively and effectively identify and support family caregivers across the lifespan. The input of family caregivers will be a key component of Strategy development.

For example, I had put off scheduling a routine eye exam because it felt like I’d be adding one more thing to a list that’s already too long.

Before I got around to scheduling an appointment, my vision clinic closed, and I needed to find a new provider. I asked for recommendations from friends on social media, but that was as far as I got. Another year passed, and scheduling my appointment never made it to the top of my to-do list. Then we were in the midst of a pandemic, so I delayed it further.

About 70 percent of parents and adult caregivers — such as those tending to older people, for example — and about 85 percent of people who were both reported adverse mental health symptoms during the pandemic, versus about a third of people who did not hold those responsibilities, according to new research by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Understanding Social Isolation and its Impact on Older Adults and Those Living with Disabilities

July 28, 2021 | 2 PM EST | Online

Strong social connections are central to our physical and mental well-being. But when vulnerable older adults experience setbacks or life transitions, they may become disconnected and isolated. Through research, we know that the negative health consequences of social isolation include impaired mental performance, a compromised immune system, and a heightened risk of chronic disease, as well as depression. The health risks of prolonged isolation are equivalent to smoking 15 cigarettes a day. This webinar presentation and discussion hosted by the National Council on Aging is designed to help practitioners across sectors – as well as individuals and caregivers – better understand the similarities and important differences between loneliness and social isolation and the impact on health and well-being of older adults.

Webinar: What's Your Style? How Your Caregiving Style Impacts The Care You Provide & Your Own Well-Being

Amanda Leggett, PhD, Research Assistant Professor of Psychiatry, presented a webinar on June 22 discussing caregivers' styles of care management and how those styles are associated with health services utilization for their care recipients with dementia as well as themselves. The event was hosted by the Michigan Alzheimer's Disease Research Center.
Search. Find. Help. Connecting Organizations To Resources That Help Older Adults And Their Caregivers During Emergencies

Today, a new resource is available to help leaders and staff at organizations serving community-dwelling older adults and their caregivers find resources to support these populations during public health emergencies.

Search. Find. Help. is a searchable online library that connects organizations to approximately 300 existing resources that can help older adults and caregivers—ranging from tip sheets to prepare older adults for public health emergencies to tools to identify individuals in a community who need support following a disaster. The resources focus on addressing social isolation, chronic conditions, elder abuse and neglect, caregiver support, delayed medical care and emergency preparedness.

Search. Find. Help. was born out of the need to connect organizations to existing resources that can help older adults and their caregivers before, during, and after an emergency. A recent formative research study found hundreds of resources that could help older adults and their caregivers—but there was a need to centralize the resources and connect them to organizations that could use them. Search. Find. Help. organizes hundreds of resources and offers easy-to-use search features for organizations to identify and learn more about resources that can meet the needs of their populations.

Supporting Better Dementia Care

Attending to an older adult’s mentation, or cognitive function, is a fundamental principle of our Age-Friendly Health Systems movement and is especially critical for older adults and their families living with all forms of dementia. In 2020, the John A. Hartford Foundation expended its efforts toward improving dementia care through initiatives that support clinicians and family caregivers who provide it.

Navigating the Pandemic: A Survey of U.S. Employers

Employers play a vital societal role by providing employment, work experience, employee benefits, and the ability for workers to save and invest for a secure retirement. This report examines the pandemic's impact on employers across company, their response, and timely opportunities. A strong employee benefits package, including retirement benefits, health insurance, workplace wellness programs, and caregiver support, can create a win-win situation for employers and their employees. Especially now, as our nation is emerging from the pandemic, employers need support from policymakers to continue paving the way for their recovery and to make it as easy as possible to enhance their business practices and expand their benefits offerings.

Can We Talk About Caregiving? Tips to Support Family Caregivers

Caregivers Count
Caregivers are an essential part of our healthcare system. Many people, though, don’t see themselves as a “caregiver” and, as a result, don’t realize the critical role that they play. Here are five tips to help caregivers recognize their role, learn about the resources that can support their specific needs and feel more prepared for the challenges of caregiving.

Brain Guide By UsAgainstAlzheimer's

UsAgainstAlzheimer’s has released a new resource for you and your family’s brain health. It’s never too late to take action on brain health. BrainGuide is a first-of-its-kind platform that empowers people with knowledge and resources to take the best next steps in managing their own or a loved one’s brain health.

The BrainGuide memory questionnaire does not provide a diagnosis, but it can help guide you toward information and resources that inform the next best steps you or a loved one can take. No information is recorded or shared with anyone other than the person completing the questionnaire. The BrainGuide memory questionnaire can be completed as a self-administered questionnaire or filled out by a caregiver or someone close to you. Questionnaires are not recorded or shared with anyone other than the individual completing the questionnaire.
