CAREGIVING IN THE NEWS

Student Caregivers Face Challenging Dual Responsibilities

Caregivers pursuing bachelors or other degrees face increased emotional distraction and financial strain that educational institutions could ease by implementing some basic policies and support systems, a recent AARP study revealed.

The academic, economic, and emotional toll for students with added caregiving responsibilities is clear. Seven in 10 student caregivers reported that their caregiving duties impacted their ability to handle academic commitments, the study found, while six in 10 said that they have struggled to pay for school. Emotional distress (and the resulting distraction) was the most commonly cited impact, but about one-third struggled with late assignments, missed classes, and lack of test preparation because of their caregiving duties.

Still, many of these student caregivers keep the stress hidden from school officials who may be best positioned to lend help, including financial aid departments and student health centers.

Paid Family and Medical Leave Is Essential for Older Adults, Too

When people think of paid family and medical leave, they often think of parents taking time off to bond with their newborns. As important as that is, an often-overlooked group that also urgently needs a robust system of paid leave is older Americans — even those who are retired.

For older adults who are still in the workforce, paid leave is crucial to manage chronic, as well as acute, health conditions. Such medical concerns can affect workers of all ages, but they're felt disproportionately by older ones since health almost inevitably deteriorates with age.

Caregiving Shortage Worsens Throughout the Country as Population Ages

A program at Detroit’s Hannan Center that provides day care for adults with dementia, offering a needed break for their caregivers, was one of the projects discussed by panelists at a public forum on issues facing caregivers and possible solutions for them.

Paula Duren, a Detroit-based psychologist, is one of an increasing number of caregivers of elderly adults who felt overwhelmed by the task of caring for aging parents, both of whom suffered from dementia.

“There were moments that felt like you didn’t even know what to do,” Duren said. “It brings about a helplessness.”

Duren was a panelist at a virtual forum last week hosted by the New York & Michigan Solutions Journalism Collaborative, a group of news, community and academic organizations that cover chronic problems with a solutions-focused lens, and Strides for Seniors, an annual month-long event series focused on Detroit’s senior centers.

AARP Poll Reveals Strong Family Caregiver Tax Credit Support

Adults age 50 and older overwhelmingly want Congress to enact legislation providing financial support for family caregivers, and most prefer to get their long-term care in their home, with help from a caregiver, according to a new AARP public opinion survey.

Eight in 10 registered voters who responded to the survey favor providing family caregivers who work with a tax credit of up to $5,000, with the credit based on how much the caregivers spend to aid their loved ones. Support for assistance for family caregivers was bipartisan across all the survey questions. For example, while among all respondents, 84 percent support the tax credit, 78 percent of Republicans, 93 percent of Democrats and 83 percent of independents favor such assistance.

Engaging Caregivers: A Program for Healthcare Workers

September 23, 2021 | 10 AM - 11 AM CST | Webinar

Healthcare workers can better serve patients through partnership with caregivers, but there is limited formal training and support on how to engage caregivers in care planning. This series will explore the role of caregivers and their experiences in supporting the health of loved ones. We will examine issues including difficult behaviors, elder abuse and advocacy, diversity and cultural competence and we'll identify resources to support healthcare workers along the way. Certificate of attendance provided upon request.

Join us to discuss: Defining Caregivers & Recognizing Their Experiences

- What research tells us about caregiver experience, challenges, and well-being
- Are caregivers a resource, partner, or client?
- Self-care for caregivers and professional caregivers

How Emerging U.S. Children's Hospice Homes are Fulfilling an Unmet Need for Overnight Respite

ARCH joined the BREAK Exchange to present this webinar with Jonathan Cottor, MBA, MPH, Father, Advocate, co-founder of Ryan House in Phoenix, Arizona. Ryan House was recognized by ARCH as an Innovative and Exemplary Respite Service in 2020.

The #1 wish that all families with a child on a life-limited journey wants is a cure, next is some sleep. The U.K. Children's Hospice Home model started almost 40 years ago with Helen House and has grown to over 54 homes today around the globe. This simple concept focuses on family and caregiver support by providing overnight respite, and pediatric palliative and end-of-life hospice care throughout a child's journey. Thankfully three communities have succeeded in opening this much needed care model in the U.S., and many more are in various stages of development.

NAC Presents The Circle of Care Guidebook for Caregivers of Children with Rare and/or Serious Illnesses

The National Alliance for Caregiving is proud to present The Circle of Care Guidebook for Caregivers of Children with Rare and/or Serious Illnesses, a new resource designed in partnership with Global Genes and with support by Mallinckrodt Pharmaceuticals to provide caregivers with the support, services and specialized information they need to care for a child with a rare and/or serious illness. This guidebook offers an extensive list of resources to help a caregiver in any situation throughout the entirety of their journey as a rare disease caregiver, compiled by those in the rare disease space and caregivers themselves. This list is supplemented by the specialized information needed in order to care for a child with a rare and/or serious illness. If you or someone you know cares for a child living with a rare and/or serious illness, make sure to check out the guidebook at the link below.

You'll learn about:

- The process of getting an accurate diagnosis for a rare and/or serious illness;
- Genetic testing, clinical trials and support groups that can help;
- Information on treatment and care coordination with specialized teams;
- Understanding the cost of care and treatment;
- Advocating for your child, their care and in their disease space;
- Empowering your child to manage their rare and/or serious illness through all aspects of their life, including when they become an adult; and
- Caring for yourself and your family.

There is also an appendix with a comprehensive list of online resources, supports and services for caregivers, the child living with the rare and/or serious illness, and his or her family that are referenced throughout the guidebook.

What's Public Health Got To Do With... Family Caregiving?

Trust for America's Health (TFAH) has published a blog, "What's Public Health Got To Do With... Family Caregiving?," to launch its new monthly blog series on Age-Friendly Public Health Systems. This series is designed to stir up conversation, generate interest, and challenge healthy aging stakeholders to engage more deeply in age-friendly public health issues.

Author of this month's blog on "What's Public Health Got To Do With... Family Caregiving?," Megan Wolfe, TFAH's Senior Policy Development Manager, outlines five potential roles for public health departments to support caregivers, organized according to TFAH's AFPHS 5Cs Framework. The roles include collecting and disseminating data, coordinating existing supports and services, connecting and convening multiple sectors, communicating, and complementing existing supports.

Report: The United States Should Recognize and Support Caregiving Youth

In the United States, more than 5.4 million children and adolescents under age 18 provide care for family members who are aging or have chronic illness, disability, or other health conditions that require assistance.

In this policy study published in the Society for Research in Child Development's Social Policy Report, the authors describe youth's care for the family and highlight the increasing prevalence, global challenges, and uneven successes of measurement and categorization. They briefly summarize research on how caregiving affects youth's academic, social, and emotional well-being. Next, they present novel, emerging evidence from the public school-based 2019 Youth Risk Behavior Survey for the State of Florida, which suggests that as many as 24 percent of middle school students and 16 percent of high school students provide at least some care to the family on a regular basis. Drawing on this evidence, the authors' discuss targeted social programs which have been shown to promote the well-being of caregiving youth outside of the United States, as well as a 13-year-old school-based intervention in The School District of Palm Beach County, Florida.

The report concludes with specific recommendations for a path toward recognizing and supporting caregiving youth via policy and practice in the United States. Its aim is to increase the awareness and feasibility of identifying and supporting caregiving youth and their families via government-organized data collection and targeted social policies.

Navigating the Pandemic: A Survey of U.S. Employers

Employers play a vital societal role by providing employment, work experience, employee benefits, and the ability for workers to save and invest for a secure retirement. This report examines the pandemic's impact on employers across company, their response, and timely opportunities. A strong employee benefits package, including retirement benefits, health insurance, workplace wellness programs, and caregiver support, can create a win-win situation for employers and their employees. Especially now, as our nation is emerging from the pandemic, employers need support from policymakers to continue paving the way for their recovery and to make it as easy as possible to enhance their business practices and expand their benefits offerings.
